Scam

Police are reminding farmers in Northumberland not to fall victim to a scam.

Officers have received a number of reports of man contacting farmers claiming to be from the police and asking if they would like to take out an advert in a Police Community Magazine which he claims is distributed locally and aimed at tackling young people hanging around on the streets.

The man is said to sound very plausible and uses the names of neighbours and alleges they have already taken out adverts - which they have not. He asks callers for credit card details over the phone.

Chief Inspector Aidan Sloan, of Northumberland Area Command, said: "The calls are a scam. Northumbria Police does not cold-call people for advertising purposes, does not have paid-for advertising in its publications and does not have a community magazine in which adverts are carried.

"Anyone contacted by anyone claiming to be from police, or from an organisation claiming they have been requesting them to take out adverts is being scammed and they should simply put the phone down. If they are in any doubt they can ring 101 and we will confirm this is a scam.

"Our advice is never hand over your bank details to anyone cold-calling - whether over the phone or the internet. If you are in any doubt tell the person you will call them back so you can check out whether they are genuine and who they say they are."

Anyone with any information about the identity of this man is urged to contact Northumbria Police on 101 ext 69191 or Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111.

If you see any vehicles or people acting suspiciously in and around your property please contact Police immediately - making a note of the registration number, make, model and possible direction of travel. Then please contact Police IMMEDIATELY on 999.

Have you been offered any tools, tack etc that 'look too good to be true' then please contact us.

Please consider when you refuel your vehicles - if they are not required over the weekend, then consider fuelling them on the morning you require them rather than leave them fully fuelled over night.

Please ensure that vehicle keys for agricultural machinery and quads are kept securely away from the vehicle and out of sight.

Speeding

Community Speed Watch Deployments:

21/08/13	Park Road, Swarland	9 vehicles checked Nil speeding
21/08/13	The Avenue, Swarland	20 vehicles checked Nil speeding
21/08/13	South View, Hipsburn	40 vehicles checked Nil speeding

Coquetdale Police now have a further eight (8) Community Speed Watch applications progressing.

This will serve to increase CSW deployments, to target key areas identified by the community, to deter and prevent excessive speed.

We are very grateful to our volunteers for their time and commitment
